AWA Cook Book Project Features Local Women

Joan Brien, editor and author of "Cooking Over Time," a book featuring the stories and recipes of over 40 women, is putting the finishing touches on the project.

"It has been a very busy summer," Brien says. "I have had the good fortune to meet with over 40 women, some of whom I interviewed personally and others who have been in the news and story of Antigonish.

Brien, although an Antigonish native, has spent the past few years living in other parts of the world. The book that she has written is a true appreciation of her home community, though her work on the project, "It is, in essence, a collection of stories and recipes that have been passed down from one generation to the next. I have enjoyed working with women from all walks of life. Some will be remembered for their contributions to the community, but their stories will be available in Antigonish news to tell for the Christmas season."

AWA Cook Book Project Features Local Women

Jane Baker, editor and author of Cooking Over Time, a book featuring the stories and recipes of many local women, is putting the finishing touches on the project.

"It has been a very busy summer," she says. "I have had the great fortune to meet with over 60 women, some of whom I interviewed personally who are women of inspiration to the town and county of Antigonish."

Baker, although an Antigonish native, has spent most of her years living in other parts of the world. She says that she has gained a new appreciation of her home community through her work on the project. "It is amazing when you realize that the women I have enjoyed speaking to are from all walks of life. Some who will be remembered for their contributions to the Antigonish Movement, and others who are helping to build a better future for the town and county of Antigonish."

"The women also reflect the broad range of women in our community. Some are mothers, some are grandmothers, some are teachers, some are artists, some are business women, some are retired, some are still working, some are students, some are immigrants, some are Antigonish natives, but they all have a story to tell."

Baker says that she is looking forward to the printing of the book, which is expected to be in the fall. "The book will be a valuable resource for the Antigonish community and will be available in Antigonish stores in time for the Christmas season."

Regional Students Promote Non-smoking

Students at the John Hogg High School, High School, participated in the Antigonish Health Project's "Weekend Workshop" on smoking cessation. The workshop was held on Saturday, January 11, during the Antigonish Health Project's Non-Smoking Week.

For the Week, organized by the Antigonish Health Project, the group presented materials and information on tobacco and the dangers of smoking.

Presenting on the topic of Non-Smoking Week, "Selling to Me" was a "Coke" cigarette. Students had to explain the group with the slogan, and named the information.
